

I can't believe that another school year has gone by. We had so much fun this year! We had the opportunity to visit the Quigley Museum to spend some time experiencing the what it was like in a one room schoolhouse. It was so interesting learning about the history of Amherst. We spent another day walking downtown Amherst to visit the Mayor's office. We got to participate in a mock council meeting and learn about all the things the mayor has to do to help the city.

We visited the fire station and spent a lot of time learning about our volunteer fire fighters and all the things they do to protect the people who live here. We had lunch at Right Track nutrition, saw the old St. Joseph school, the natural spring and then went to the library to look at old books about Amherst and see the old part of the library.

The best thing we did was build and decorate Gingerbread houses for our holiday celebration.

We designed and planted a garden this year, made landforms in our study of the land, created diorama boxes of our animal along with an animal report, studied onions under the microscope, made an art project out of recyclables and planted a garden outside our window.
